BOARD OF SAFETY STATEMENT ON REJECTION OF

METROPOLITAN HUMAN RELATIONS COMMISSION PROTOCOL AGREEMENT

The suggestion that the Board of Safety of the City of Fort Wayne enter into an agreement with the Metropolitan Human Relations Commission is not a new concept. In metropolitan areas with large police departments, the involvement of citizen groups in the inner workings of police departments has either been tried and later abandoned by several metropolitan areas in this country or has been rejected at the outset.

A thorough investigation of what has been suggested for the Board of Safety and Police Department of the City of Fort Wayne, as well as an investigation of what has taken place in other communities where such citizen boards have been tried, has led us to the conclusions which we will enumerate in this statement.

By its very nature, the Police Department is operated with a quasi-military procedure. The organization is highly structured, strongly regimented, and very definitive in the enumeration of the rights and responsibilities of the component members of the department. We are fortunate in Fort Wayne that close cooperation between the Board of Public Safety and the Police Department has resulted in an extremely well run police organization. The rapidly decreasing instances of major crimes in this community is proof that the department is operating efficiently and productively. A major component of that department is the Internal Affairs Office. It is this office, if you will, which polices the Police Department and serves as the "conscience" of the individual officers and their performance in the line of duty. The Internal Affairs Office is charged with investigating and recommending action as the result of all complaints, charges, or insinuations made about the conduct of any police investigation. Inasmuch as the Internal Affairs Office has the right to use any and all parts of the department, including laboratory and polygraph sections, the work of this office and the material which it gathers is privileged information. To open up the files and the investigations of this department, as the protocol agreement between the Metropolitan Human Relations Commission and the Board of Safety would require, would blatantly deny the right of due process to officers of the Police Department.

It is obvious that the Metropolitan Human Relations Commission, in its desire to guarantee and preserve the civil rights of the citizens of Fort Wayne, is willing to disregard, compromise, or remove the civil rights of the police officers. It is obvious that implementation of this agreement would make it impossible for members of the Police Department to have their rights protected under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. In fact, a very thorough system for the conduct of complaints already exists. Anyone dissatisfied with their treatment by a police officer can file a complaint with the Police Department. That complaint can be followed up with the Board of Safety. If the complaint is genuine and satisfaction has still not been received, an alternate recourse is to the Prosecuting Attorney and then to a Grand Jury.

In those communities which have allowed the type of citizen review sought by the Metropolitan Human Relations Commission, the number of invalid complaints has risen rapidly as those arrested have filed complaints against arresting officers merely with the hope of having a police record expunged. Complaints have been filed merely to harass police officers and have resulted in the long run in a lowering of police investigation standards as officers have begun to fear citizen reprisal as the result of every investigation and arrest.

A police officer's life is in danger every moment of every day and to fulfill the demand of a society which wants constant and rapid protection often requires split-second decisions. No officer wants to be placed in the position of being second guess for every decision made under such trying circumstances. The eventual result of having a non-police or non-judicial body involved in the review process is a reduction in police protection for every citizen of the community.

It is our belief that the Board of Safety, if it is to remain steadfast in its commitment both to the individual members of the Police Department and to the requirements for protection by the citizens of this community, must decline to participate in a program which would destroy the constitutional rights of the members of the Police Department and in the process decrease the police protection received by every citizen of the community.
